Attention: Ashvin Singh

Dear Sir:

Re: Twinn, Roland et al., as Trustees for the 1985 Sawridge Trust
QB Action No: 1103 14112

In reply to your letter of July 21st, 2014, we have considered your request seeking any information that DIAND may have been provided with, which may help determine what assets were transferred into the 1982 Trust upon its creation by the Sawridge Band ("Band"), and then subsequently transferred into the 1985 Trust.

First, although formally DIAND is not a party against whom any relief is sought, we have provided assistance with this Application in the past (e.g. sending out notice of the Application to Band members) and are prepared to consider reasonable requests for further assistance. However, in this case, it would be an extremely costly and time consuming exercise for DIAND to attempt to look for information it may not even possess back to 1982. If it turns out the information was in fact never transmitted to DIAND, the search may not only turn out to be onerous, but fruitless.

From our review of the transcript excerpts you sent us, it appears the Public Trustee's request for the undertaking simply assumes DIAND has information about these Trusts and the request was made without any documentary or other factual information indicating there is a reasonable likelihood that the information either exists or was in fact transmitted to DIAND. In other words, without some evidentiary foundation that the Band provided DIAND with this information, the request resembles a "fishing expedition", with DIAND tasked with looking for fish which may not exist. Although it is odd the Trustee of these Trusts does not appear to have the information, before the search for this information is imposed on third parties, it would seem more reasonable for the Public Trustee to first ask the "settlor" of the Trusts, that is, the Band itself:

Canada

- a) Why the Band doesn't have the information?;
- b) Whether they have inquired of the lawyers, law professors, or accountants who helped them create the 1982 Trust to see if they have the information?;
- c) Failing which, do they have any documentation or other factual information from which one could conclude there was a reasonable likelihood that this information was transmitted to DIAND?

Second, if the Public Trustee could obtain the information from the Band itself, that would also remove another hurdle that would have to be overcome before DIAND could release the sought-after information even if it searches for it and found it. That hurdle would be obtaining the Band's consent or a Court Order for the release of information that would otherwise be protected from production to third parties

For these reasons DIAND is not prepared to embark upon a search for this information in the present circumstances. On the other hand, if the Band itself cannot, for some reason, find this information amongst its own records, or those of its professional advisors, and can provide some factual basis for showing that they provided this information to DIAND by means of letters, etc. as well as a consent to release this information to third parties, we will reconsider our position.

Yours truly,

E. James Kindrake
